

FORENSIC LINGUISTIC ANALYSIS

As part of this investigation, the claimant's interview transcript has been subjected to forensic linguistic analysis. This technique examines the language, structure, and content of the account for features that may indicate inconsistency, rehearsal, omission, or contradiction. The findings below summarise the results of that analysis and are presented to assist the insurer in its claims assessment. They do not constitute a finding of fraud; they identify features that require consideration and, where appropriate, further enquiry.

Overall linguistic risk assessment: HIGH

The analysis has identified 3 high-concern findings — specifically, proven contradiction, proven contradiction, negative admission — which the insurer should consider carefully. These are in addition to 1 further item requiring clarification.

Active Findings (4)

High Concern

2x Proven Contradiction

The account contains statements that directly contradict one another. Where a claimant's own words are internally inconsistent, this undermines the reliability of the account and warrants close scrutiny before indemnity is considered.

Negative Admission

The claimant has made a statement that is adverse to their own position — an admission, concession, or acknowledgement that weakens the validity or quantum of the claim. These statements are made voluntarily and carry evidential weight.

Requires Clarification

Unsupported Assertion

A material claim of fact is made without any corroborating detail, witness, or documentary support. These assertions cannot be verified from the account alone and should be tested against available evidence.

LINGUISTIC REVIEW OF THE ACCOUNT

The interview transcript was reviewed for points where the account conflicts with itself or with the records on file, or where something said bears on the claim. Each point below shows the claimant's own words alongside what they are set against, so the reader can weigh it directly. The review identifies points to resolve; it makes no finding about honesty, and every point has been reviewed by the investigating officer.

Most of the account is consistent with itself and with the documents on file. Three points need resolving before a decision is reached; each has a specific next step.

Material to the decision

1. Conflicting accounts · When the vehicle was last seen

CLARIFY

WHAT WAS SAID

"I parked it about half nine and went straight to bed."

Interview 12:41

SET AGAINST

"I got back from my brother's around eleven, maybe quarter past."

Interview 27:03

Why it matters The two times are 90 minutes apart and set the start of the window in which the vehicle was taken.

Possible innocent explanation Times given from memory are often approximate; the claimant may be estimating one or both.

Next step Ask which time is correct and whether anything fixes it (phone activity, doorbell camera, a message sent on arrival).

2. Account differs from the record · Number of keys

PUT TO CLAIMANT

WHAT WAS SAID

"There's only ever been the two keys, both here."

Interview 08:15

SET AGAINST

Three keys supplied at sale.

Dealer invoice, 14 March 2024

Why it matters An unaccounted-for key is relevant to how the vehicle was taken without force.

Possible innocent explanation The third key may have been lost or retained before the claimant's ownership, or the invoice may be wrong.

Next step Show the invoice and ask what became of the third key.

3. Admission adverse to the claim · Who drives the vehicle

CLARIFY

WHAT WAS SAID

"Me mate borrows it now and then when his is in the garage."

Interview 19:52

SET AGAINST

Policyholder is the only named driver.

Policy schedule

Why it matters Use by a driver not named on the policy may be relevant to cover.

Possible innocent explanation The friend may be covered under his own policy, and the use may be occasional and unrelated to this loss.

Next step Establish how often, whether he had the vehicle in the week of the loss, and whether he holds his own cover.

To be evidenced

4. Not yet evidenced · Tracker alert		OBTAIN
WHAT WAS SAID	ON FILE
"The tracker company said it went offline at the services."	No tracker report on file.
Interview 31:20	Case documents
Why it matters The tracker record would independently confirm the time and place of loss.
Next step Request the tracker provider's event log for the 48 hours either side of the loss.
